Glean Retreat

Glean Retreat is a warm, community-centered weekend where we gather the best of what each person brings. Participants share their skills, approaches, perspectives, and everyday know-how, small things with big usefulness. Like the ancient practice of gleaning, we collect what's good, what's left behind, and what others gladly offer.

You'll leave with new practices, fresh ideas, meaningful connections, and the kind of insight that sticks. No experts required, just people willing to share what they know and learn from one another.

Glean Workshops

Workshops at Glean are shaped entirely by the community. In a round-robin style, participants share the things they've learned, tried, made, or discovered everyday skills, handy tricks, creative ideas, useful methods. If NPR's Life Kit and a TED Talk had a hands-on folk-school twist, this would be it. You don't need to be an expert. Bring something you enjoy or something that's helped you along the way, and offer it to the group.
